

STORY STONES

Focusing on Communication and Literacies

Telling stories with stones is an indigenous tradition that can explain historical events, life lessons, beliefs and values, feelings and emotions, and helps us to better understand the world of human interactions. Storytelling with stones also promotes listening skills, inviting the listener to use their imagination and worldly experiences to create meaning.

Indigenous Story Stones promote a greater understanding for indigenous heritage including literacy through storytelling and symbol systems.

WHAT ARE STORY STONES?

Story stones are pictures painted onto smooth pebbles, used as an aid in storytelling - they can either represent a known story to be placed in order, or they can be a varied selection of images that prompt children to create their own stories. Storytelling through story stones nurtures key skills, such as social communication, creativity, logical thinking and supports learning through play objectives. Stories are an inclusive way to help children learn no matter what their abilities are.

CREATE THE ENVIRONMENT

How do we make Story Stones?

1. Find 8-10 flat shaped rocks. River rocks are best or you can buy them at the dollar store. Flat stones help children apply their imagery.
2. Have your children add pictures to their stones with a permanent marker, paint or paint pens. The pictures can be simple line drawings or detailed colored drawings. Use a thicker paint such as acrylic as it shows up better and will not bleed into other colours.
3. Brainstorm ideas together. Get creative and use your imagination!

SONG

One Drum by Leela Gilday

We respectfully acknowledge that the land on which we gather is the unceded, traditional, and ancestral territory of the Coast Salish Peoples, including the territories of the xʷməθkʷəy̍əm (Musqueam), Skwxwú7mesh (Squamish), and Səlílwətaʔ/Selilwutlh (Tseil-Waututh) Nations.

Lyrics

Life unfolds around me
I can choose which path I take
Will it be darkness again?
Or the brilliant life I make?
We are standing on the shoulders of giants
We are standing in the shelter of ancients
We are speaking the truth of the people
We are marching to the beat.
One drum One drum
Way hey ya hey Way hey ya hey
Way hey ya hey Way hey ya hey
